Free · The Family Handover Kit, Australia · general information, not legal advice

Official power of attorney forms: New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland

The forms each state publishes, who issues each one, and the date we checked it. Then a record of where this household's own papers are.

Prepared and checked by Valoren, a UK business, not an Australian law firm. This is general information, not legal advice about your circumstances. No Australian lawyer has reviewed this page.

Using this file

The three tables are the official forms of New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland, one table a state. Each row is one form as the body that publishes it names it, with its number and version where it prints one, the body's name, and the date we checked that page.

The tables do not say which form you need. Each state's own page says what each form is for, and a solicitor can say what fits your household. The web address of each form's page is listed under "Sources for this file".

The file ends with a record. It asks which of these documents this household has, who was appointed, and where each original is kept. Names and places only. It is not one of the documents, and filling it in appoints nobody.

The bodies change their forms. A printed copy is a snapshot of the dates it carries. The page on our site is kept current, and a row we have not checked within 62 days is withheld there.

Appointment of Enduring Guardian	not published online by any NSW body we read The Local Court of NSW says the Appointment of Enduring Guardian form can be obtained from your local post office or by contacting a Local Court Registry. NSW Trustee and Guardian says it does not provide blank Appointment of Enduring Guardian forms, because it prepares the document as part of its service. NCAT says it only provides forms to review an enduring guardian appointment or enduring power of attorney. The Local Court of NSW says you can download a Power of Attorney form from the Land Registry Services website, or purchase a "Prepare your own Enduring Power of Attorney and Enduring Guardianship Pack", which are available at post offices. This page lists the court's sentences as a reference. The pack is a commercial product, not an official form, and this is not a recommendation.			3 November 2026

If a document is with a solicitor, the firm's name and the file reference are enough. If you are not sure whether a document exists, write that: it tells the family what to look for.
